ANOTHER TWELVE MONTHS' WORK OUTLINED.

A BRILLIANT SOCIAL AFFAIR

MERCHANTS GIVE BANQUET AND BALL.

ANNUAL EVENT A SUCCESS

McCracken's Report Shows Local Organization of Business Men to Be One of Strongest in West. Boosting Spirit Characteristic of Speeches.

Colorado Springs, represented by its leading merchants and business men, met last night at the Antlers hotel to tell the story of a year's achievements, to plan for another twelve months' activity and to enjoy itself at the banquet board and in the ballroom. The occasion was the fourth annual gathering of the Merchants association, and it was the most notable and successful of the many successful affairs which that progressive organization has conducted.

At the Speakers' Table.

The hall was simply decorated with potted plants. In the center and at the north side of the hall were placed the speakers' table, at which were seated Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Hemenway, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. McCracken, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Henning, Mayor D. N. Heizer, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Messervy, Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Wulff, Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Emery.

President Hemenway Speaks.

Following the dinner came the speech making, President O. E. Hemenway acting as toastmaster. In few well-chosen words he welcomed the guests of the association and spoke briefly of the objects and purposes of the Merchants association, which, he asserted, were to make more of the business and to build up Colorado Springs. Mr. Hemenway then introduced S. D. McCracken, the retiring president of the association, who told of the accomplishments of the organization during the last year in which it has reached a position as one of the strongest business organizations in the entire west.

Mayor D. N. Heizer, in behalf of the city, spoke in praise of the work of the association. He recommended two important matters for its consideration during the coming year, the development of Fountain valley, and the realization of the plan to make the Pikes Peak forest reserve a national park.

Hemming Optimistic.

C. C. Hemming, who delivered the main address of the evening on "Finance," took as his topic the present financial situation. His attitude was full of confidence in the stability of Colorado Springs and its business interests. He showed how the flurry would affect other sections of the country, and why it would not disturb conditions in the west, and particularly in this city.

At the close of Mr. Hemming's address, Secretary Frank F. Wulff introduced a bit of humor when he read a "telegram" from Washington, D. C., as follows:

"O. E. Hemenway, president Merchants association, Colorado Springs, Colo., long live your association; may it ever prosper. There are only two president, you and I.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

After the banquet, the guests went to the Antlers ballroom, where the annual ball was held. It proved as enjoyable a function as had the banquet.

McCracken's Report.

Mr. McCracken, in outlining the work of the year just closed, made the following report:

Colorado Springs, Colo., Nov. 11, 1907.

To the Members of the Merchants Association of Colorado Springs, Colorado:

[illegible] Gent[illegible] As the retiring president of this organization, it gives me great pleasure to have the honor of submitting to you for your kind indulgence and consideration, the fifth annual report of the work that has been accomplished by this association during the year now drawing to a close.

points about the inception and development of this most powerful and influential organization, and I shall direct your attention to the matters that have had the consideration of this body during the period I have referred to.

Twenty-three new names were added to our roll during the last year, giving our association a total membership of 335 of the most representative and reputable business concerns of the city. And I will here state that I deem it a great honor and privilege to be eligible to membership in an organization of such magnitude and widespread influence in the community as this one has come to be.

Money Well Spent.

With the exception of the annual dues [illegible] was held on our membership roll, but the smallest percentage of withdrawals the association has ever had occurred during the last 12 months of its existence. Many of those who failed in the matter of keeping up their dues have removed from the city. Much of the money that was formerly solicited from individuals and firms, for the purpose of defraying the expenses of entertaining conventions, reunions, etc., is now being disbursed through the agency of the Merchants association, where it will have careful attention, and be distributed to the greatest advantage possible, the understanding usually being that where money is thus appropriated the officers to whom the donation is made shall not solicit further from individual firms. In this way the amount of annual dues in[illegible] of the association, who escape the personal canvass for funds.

We will now briefly review some of the more important matters in which the association was engaged during the year.

On December 13, 1906, the question of a pure food law was presented, and after thorough consideration of the matter, a committee was appointed to draft resolutions to be sent to our state senators and representatives, asking them to frame or support a pure food law for Colorado, similar to the national pure food law passed at the last session of Congress.

At the same meeting the matter of the proposed stove and range factory for Colorado City was thoroughly gone into and as it was considered a worthy project, the association declared its willingness to support and aid the promoters in the enterprise. The factory is now in operation.

On January 10, 1907, the proposition of establishing a city scales in the north end of the city for the convenience of north end residents receiving coal brought up and a committee to investigate the matter was appointed. This committee has labored persistently in connection with a committee from the City Council and we now have the assurance that within a short time our demands will be realized.

On January 21, 1907, a great deal of agitation on the part of certain individuals and corporate interests, whose efforts seemed to meet with some consideration, was the occasion of a special meeting of the association to protest against the closing of Pikes Peak avenue at the Santa Fe tracks. The association was unanimous in its determination to frustrate such a plan, that when adjournment was taken the members proceeded in a body to the city hall, where the Council was in session, and there, in no uncertain terms, expressed its disapproval of such changes as were asked for by representatives of the Santa Fe railroad.

Secured Factory for Springs.

On February 14, 1907, the Good-speed Manufacturing company, who were contemplating the erection of a factory for the manufacture of a patent valve for steam engines, were given a hearing, and after considerable discussion there remained no doubt that such an industry would be beneficial to the business interests of the city. They were given the indorsement of the association, and upon this indorsement depended the location of the factory in Colorado Springs. The factory is now in operation and employs many skilled mechanics who were imported from eastern cities.

On March 14, 1907, the attention of the association was directed to the fact that a trading stamp concern was trying to operate in this city, and our committee lost no time in formulating plans to disappoint the promoters and keep them out. A petition was circulated among the business men asking them to refuse to give stamps with all purchases. The committee met with great success, and the stamp company's representatives were compelled to leave our city.

On April 11, 1907, our records show that one of the greatest strokes of association for local merchants the association has ever accomplished, was performed. The R. F. Slattery company of New York city and Boston, quietly slipped into the city and opened up a stock of cloaks, suits, etc., worth about $[illegible] in the Antlers hotel, and in fact a third office business. The secretary was informed of their presence in the city and at once informed the proper committee. The assessor's office was notified, and the police department set to work, and in order to escape prosecution, the parties locked up their goods and left the city, the payment of two weeks' hotel bills [illegible]

The Letter Carriers Home.

On May 8, 1907, final plans in the matter of the National Letter Carriers' home site were formulated and the association is now in possession of the land purchased for that purpose. In this matter the association has been deeply interested, and the construction of this home will be a great benefit to the entire city.

On June 18, 1907, the association appointed five delegates to the public lands convention that was held in the city of Denver, June 18 to 21. Our delegates, together with those from this city representing the Chamber of Commerce, the Real Estate exchange, Horticultural society and business organizations of Colorado City and Manitou, composed the El Paso county delegation, and were successful in having their resolutions given a cordial consideration, and extracts thereof embodied in the resolutions passed by the convention to be forwarded to the congressmen representing the entire United States.

On August 30, 1907, at a special meeting of the association the Rock Island railroad matter was carefully gone into. It had been reported that the roundhouse now located at Roswell had been definitely decided upon and that the division point in the future would be Limon, Colorado, instead of Roswell. The report also contained the information that the [illegible] would be improved in Pueblo instead of this city. A committee was appointed to wait upon Mr. Abbott, superintendent of the Colorado division, who gave the assurance that nothing detrimental to the business interests of the city would result from the changes that had gone into effect or were contemplated. The committee is still out, and have the matter in hand at the present time.

On October 10, 1907, the association was asked to give its indorsement to a proposed broom factory to be established in this city by Peter Bechtle of Fortuna, Mo. The indorsement was given and the factory is now in operation with a capacity of about 50 dozen brooms per day.

This, in a general way, recalls to mind the most important matters the association has been interested in during the last year. Many other propositions have had its attention, but time will not permit me to enumerate them.

Some Suggestions.

Now, as we are about to enter upon the labors of another year, let us profit by the experiences we have had in the past, and push forward the great organization that is doing so much in this city and community. We protect the merchants who weather the storm of the quiet winters, and who are permanently located among us, but fight to the finish hawkers and venders who prey upon our people for short periods and disappear.

And now the most essential of all things to foster the interests of this organization, is the attendance at the monthly business meetings, where grievances are reported and wrongs rectified. Do not fail for not taking a stand in such matters, unless you see it your duty to do so, and if a motion is made at the meetings, and official action authorized.

I want to think the officers, who have served with me, are for the loyalty of every member of the organization, and as we go on, may we continue a united body, shoulder to shoulder, willing to boost, and willing to help, bearing in mind that the Merchants association is not for a day but for all time.

Very respectfully,

S. H. MORRISON,
President.

Mayor Heizer Speaks.

Mayor Heizer, in his speech, urged upon the attention of the Merchants association during the coming year, two things particularly, the development of the Fountain valley, and the establishment of a Pikes Peak national park. He said in part:

"The city of Colorado Springs is to be congratulated that it has such an organization as the Merchants association. A city that would not be built up by the united efforts of such business men, big hearted, capable, and loyal to the community, is a forlorn hope.

Two Things to Work For.

"It seems to me that there are one or two things that are worth working for and to which such a representative body as this should turn its attention during the coming year. These are the development of the agricultural resources of the Fountain valley, and the accomplishment of the transfer of the Pikes Peak forest reserve into a national park. Both of these are projects of the greatest importance to the city and its development.

"The possibilities in the first instance are great. We have come to appreciate that the tourist business is one of our greatest resources. But it is always a matter of humiliation that we have to bring the foodstuff for our visitors from Missouri, Texas and other points. How much more independent could we be and how much better could we serve them with our own products.

Great Possibilities.

"There are 50,000 acres of land in the Fountain valley, which, if watered and properly developed under the intensive cultivation that is possible under irrigation, would amply suffice to support the entire community and all of its guests. The ancient valley of the Nile counted an area of only 10,000 acres. Yet it became the cradle of civilization and supported 30,000,000 souls.

"The other matter is one of equal importance—Were the Pikes Peak forest reserve transformed into a national park, this city would become a still greater tourist center."

C. C. Henning's Address.

C. C. Henning, vice president of the El Paso National bank, who made the principal address of the evening, took as his subject, "Finance." He began, however, by paying a tribute to the women, out of compliment to those present. He said:

The best we have in our national life is the adornment in the home, in the city and to the nation, of woman. She clings to us in prosperity, and is with us, faithful, in the day of adversity. It is she who gives us confidence to step forth when young and to battle with the elements of life. She to us is an angel."

Discussing Finance.

Turning to a discussion of finance, he said:

Last spring, when we thought that progress was reaching out and that nothing could prevent the pentagon [illegible] were encountered. It is best to remember that thorns and thistles are planted by the same hand that plants the flowers, and that, in time the thorns and thistles turn to blooms and blossoms.

And which is the most important thing in carrying on successfully the great trade of the people is confidence. One day, when it was least to be expected, those people in Wall Street shattered the confidence of the nation and the people to such an extent that within three days 12,000 banks suspended cash payment, not because they were insolvent, but because it was necessary to close their vaults until the people once more were restored to confidence.

Credit of Country Threatened.

There never before has been such a record of 12,000 banks suspending payment within a week. Why had it become necessary. Because in Wall Street millions upon millions of dollars of worthless stocks had been unloaded upon an unsuspecting public. All at [illegible] of manipulation. And the result was that the very life, credit, standing, and even the national importance of the country was threatened in a day, and the national treasury had to be emptied to sustain and meet the shock. If the President, with the secretary of the treasury and the co-operation of the conservative element of New York had not come to the front, the tide of destruction and devastation would have swept the country, and bankrupted every bank and city; the credit of the entire nation would have been gone.

Confidence All-Powerful.

The mechanism and machinery of credit is a wonderful thing. It is so sensitive to a feeling of depreciation and suspicion that the whole machinery of commerce [illegible] down in an instant if any part of the mechanism should get out of joint. It is upon confidence that the welfare of the people rests.

At no period of any financial depression have we been in the splendid condition that we are today. With over $40,000,000 of the year's products to move, there is no reason for us to fear the depression. There will be spots affected. In all the large manufacturing districts it will be impossible to prevent the feeling of the shock of the loss of confidence and credit. Here and in the agricultural districts, there is no reason for apprehension and distrust. In this city, there are no great manufacturing industries to be affected. The position Colorado Springs occupies as a tourist city will not be affected to any reasonable extent. The large manufacturers, for two or three years may feel the distress and strain.

A Word of Advice.

The most important thing at this time is the manifestation of the co-operative spirit. Let this association exhibit this spirit and let the members co-operate in every way for the upbuilding of the city, under the strain following the conditions in New York. Confidence is important for the credit of the city. If all work together, with confidence in each other, for the upholding and upbuilding of the city, Colorado Springs will have very little to regret from this year's troubles.

The West Is Safe.

The amount of losses occasioned by the panic in New York has been enormous. Within the last seven months, $2,000,000,000 has been lost on the board of trade in the depreciation of values. This means the impoverishment of millions of people, but this will be felt in the east and New England particularly, and will not extend largely into the west. In New England the people have no way of investing money except in stocks. They have been hunbugged and robbed by the Hon. Mr. Harriman and his clique. In the west, I am delighted to say, the people invest in land, as in the south. The crop of wheat, corn and oats ready for the market and awaiting the floating transportation, will give to the country 500,000,000 surplus dollars after paying the foreign debt. The cotton crop alone is worth $500,000,000.

"I am proud of Colorado Springs. It has the intellect in the community and this association to handle with credit and success all the undertakings of the people. And it has the money behind it to do it. It is the richest little town in the country, with one exception. They may throw up volcanic action all over the country, the mills and factories may stop, and distress may come, but this town will go ahead, and when the cry of distress is heard abroad, this town will come up to the standard of human kindness, just as it did at the time of the Galveston disaster.

"We will take no backward step. We are going ahead. This is the day of retrenchment, when men strike a balance and see where they stand. But it is not an hour of despair. This is the best town on the continent. The way to build up the town is to stand together and always to say something kind of your neighbors."

A setback means a time to think, and not a time to give up. It is the best thing that ever happened to a nation, that it is brought to realize that progress can not go on unquestionably when rascals are in control. I am glad that the thunderbolt struck Wall Street, where dishonesty and rascality reign supreme. The banks in Colorado Springs have the money. All we need is confidence in one another, the banks in the business men and the business men in the banks.

The Lunch Counter

Is the Cause of Dyspepsia and Indigestion, Catarrh of the Stomach and Heart Disease.

Nine-Tenths of Those Who Eat There Bolt Down Their Food.

The next time you eat at a lunch counter just watch the people opposite. Look upon the whole line and notice how they bolt down their food, washing it down with big coffee or iced water. First they take a large sip of water, a bite and a drink, bolting it through, and it is five to ten minutes.

Many of them don't know the correct way to eat, while others are so hurried that they will not take the time to eat properly.

The lunch counters create a great demand for Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, for every one now knows that they assist the stomach in digesting a meal that has been suddenly forced into it.

Dyspepsia stands in first place in the march for existence. With a sound body all things are possible to the man, while ill health handicaps him.

The dyspeptic is usually a soured creature, they are unfavorable in the proper spirit upon his surroundings and associates. Many a fine proposition has failed because a dyspeptic was back of it.

Your brain does not work right where digestive conditions prevail, neither does any organ of the body.

Get your digestive apparatus in perfect condition first and all will go well with you.

Take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after you cure yourself of indigestion, catarrh of the stomach and dyspepsia, and your heart, liver, brain and all the organs of the body will perform their functions properly and you will be in sound health.

Don't give up in despair but be right and all things will come your way and fortune will again smile upon you.

You can purchase Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets anywhere on earth. They have become a family necessity everywhere.

They are 50 cents per package.

in one of the imperial boxes, directly opposite the speakers. Prince Sato, the Minister of War Ridge, and other members of the cabinet were in their usual places. Several diplomatic officers and their spouses occupied the box to pay their respects to the secretary.

Mr. Donald MacKenzie Wallace, the author, who opportunely was present in the palace, joined Secretary Taft's party and acted as interpreter to the speakers. He pointed out to the leading members of the duma, Secretary Taft was impressed with the spaciousness and magnificence of the chamber, which was brilliantly illuminated. During Mr. Taft's stay, M. Shuldinsky, an Octoberist, M. Lynsh, a Pole and an Armenian Social Democrat, took turns in speaking. The session was not marked by any special incident.

The news of the presence of Secretary Taft in the chamber spread quickly, until finally the attention of practically everybody in the house, members of the ministry, soldiers, diplomats, newspaper correspondents and deputies, was centered on the imperial box.

The secretary and his party stayed nearly an hour and then took their departure.

To Visit Berlin.

BERLIN, Dec. 3. Ambassador Tower has arranged, through the foreign offices, that a special car be placed at the disposal of Secretary Taft and his party, when they reach the station on the frontier between Russia and Germany. According to the present plans, which, however, may be changed, the train which will bring the Taft car from the frontier will arrive at Berlin at 7:15 Friday evening. It will be attached to the train leaving at midnight the same night for Hamburg. Ambassador Tower has invited Secretary Taft to spend the interval at his house and partake of a family dinner.

Later the staff of the embassy, Consul General and Mrs. Thackeray and some other Americans will be invited to meet the secretary. There will be no opportunity for Taft to see any of Germany's statesmen or accept any hospitality.

DOWN TO BUSINESS.

NOW that the President's message has been heard—or at least read—the sixty-fifth Congress will settle itself to the task of getting ready for business. The chances are that nothing will be wasted. The old fashion of doing nothing till after the Christmas holidays is too rich for modern nerves. Of course when a new Speaker is chosen, and he has to make up his committees afterward, the organization can hardly be completed effected till the new year; but Speaker Cannon probably has his committees all settled, at least so far as the old members are concerned, and it will not take him very long to assign the new members, though there are a good many of them. Moreover, the introduction of bills can go on.

The Senate may take a little longer to get ready. Senator Spooner's resignation, coming in one of the most important places, and he one of the successors thereto are probably not all yet determined upon. Most important perhaps, is the place on the Committee on Commerce, and it is rumored that this is to go to Senator Knox of Pennsylvania. As we all know, the organizing of the Senate has relation to the selection of the committees; the House work does not begin through the Committee on Committees, which is thus one of the most important committees possible. It may take till Christmas to get these matters adjusted. This will not cause any real delay, however, for most of the legislation originates in the House, and the majority of the members on the various committees will remain as it was. The nation being in a prosperous mood, the organization is very little disturbed from session to session. Of course it is not likely that any bills of importance will be passed before the holidays, but some will be put on the ways ready for launching. This Congress has some very important work before it, and perhaps not the least important is to refrain from hysteria and do nothing in a hurry, especially in the way of financial and business legislation.

THE LAW'S DELAY.

THE matter of the constitutionality of the new state law appointing a Railroad Commission is not to be decided in a hurry. The other day the attorneys for the Mears roads, under the guise of amici curiae, were allowed to file a brief in support of the law; and now the Supreme Court has allowed the railroad attorneys thirty days to file an answer to their brief; and then the Attorney-General will have at least seven days to file an answer to that answer and then the court will take the matter under consideration and hand down an opinion when it gets ready.

The question of constitutionality turns on the exemptions which the act undertook to make. Mountain roads less than twenty miles long, used for hauling coal and supplies, were exempted from its provisions. The other roads claim that this is not "the equal protection of the law," which is guaranteed in the Constitution of the United States; that it is an arbitrary classification, designed specifically for the purpose of taking in roads known as the Mears roads, and therefore inequitable and unjust. The Attorney-General, of course, upholds the validity of the statute, and claims that the classification is not unduly prejudicial.

Both sides have agreed to an advancement of the cause, and it is now at the head of the docket. It was the desire of the Attorney-General to get a decision on it before the first of the year, but now it seems improbable that one can be rendered for three months yet.

We don't see that "the law's delay" is injuring anybody in this case. The state has worked along without a railroad commission for a good many years, and the crying need for such a body is not immediately apparent. On the whole, the act that was passed was fair and moderate, and we incline to believe that the railroads are making a mistake in fighting it so hard. At the time it was passed, a popular demand for railroad regulation was in the air, and many states adopted radical measures; such a measure had been promised in the Republican platform, and the legislators felt that they ought to redeem the promise. They attempted to do so in good faith. We do not see that there is any necessity for great haste in settling the matter—the important thing is to have it settled right. If the present law is unconstitutional, the next legislature, if it chooses, may enact one that is not open to that objection.

The State Treasurer of Michigan has got into trouble. He is a business man and a banker. He put two-thirds of a million of the state's money in his own bank, and the bank lent some of it to the firm of which he is the head, and the business went wrong, and the bank is closed. It is alleged that the state will get back all its money, about half of it being secured on bond; but that does not make the transaction any the less reprehensible. If there is no law against such doings in Michigan, common sense and ordinary honesty should have made it impossible for a state official to be handling money of which he is the public trustee, in his own private business. There has been too much of this sort of thing, and it is a disgraceful sign as to the public conscience, that we believe such practices are becoming rarer than they were, and that on the whole there has been some advance in the office-holders' code of ethics.

The work of getting a jury in the Pettibone case goes on a great deal faster than it did in the Haywood case. There is no reason why it should not, and no reason why the trial should be so prolonged as the Haywood trial. For one thing, it is attracting less attention; for another, the judge has learned, from his experience in the former trial, that such extreme latitude as he allowed there in the introduction of evidence is unnecessary. As for the chance—while the evidence is probably stronger against Pettibone than it was against Haywood, no one can tell how it may strike the jury; and in any case it would be improper to anticipate their verdict.

The Pittsburg millionaire who was at Newport has won for marrying his wife's French maid, and who has now taken him back because he trained a winning football team, is not altogether a charmer. The duck man has shown at least that there is one form of work—and that not so easy—that he can do and do well, and that is no small matter.

NO MOTTO.

From the Ohio State Journal.

Another good thing about clearing house certificates is that they don't have any irreverent, sacrilegious and unnecessary mottoes on them.

CONGRESSIONAL FORECAST.

From the Springfield Republican.

The coming session of Congress will doubtless see an extended and lively discussion of both currency and tariff reform, but the outcome of it will probably be a postponement of both questions to a more propitious time. Congress is never so full of talk and empty of action as in presidential years.

THE WHITE HOUSE TURKEY.

From the New York Evening Post.

All taxpayers which do not want to lose the amateur bureau service are expected to note that the presidential turkey is to be slaughtered in strict conformity with the pure food law, the meat inspection law and the government regulations of the Department of Agriculture.

TARIFF.

From the New York World.

Of course. You cannot revise the tariff when Democrats are in sight but it may make them weep and you can get power at a time when times are good but it may wipe them. The only statesmanship is to time its postponement of the necessary and inevitable.

BOB SLINGS SOME SLANG.

From the Washington Star.

"You can bet your North American life it will," said Rear Admiral Evans, when asked if the Pacific fleet could sail on time. It is to be hoped that the admiral's tendency to sailor-manship will not pass beyond the point of probability before the fleet starts.

PHILIPPINE FANTASIES.

From the New York Tribune.

The recent meeting of Fairbanks and the alleged interest of the Filipinos was marked with much confusion and hybridity. Some of the chiefly hopes of the observers with a serious view of the good fortune of the islands in having their interests administered by other hands than those of the anti-imperialists.

NOT A FREAK.

From the Boston Transcript.

The case of Marion Jones, the Italian pianist who recently married the divorced wife of King Frederick Augustus of Saxony, called to the attention of persons who think that musicians and others who entertain or amuse the public regard everything unusual in their lives as so much material to be used for advertising purposes. This gentleman, his story runs, refused to make a professional tour through Warsaw, Russian Poland, because he could leave his wife at home. Nothing but his artistic shoulder, perhaps, lay in that alone—he tried to feel, should audiences come to hear. He would have no assistance through the curiosity which the presence of his wife would create. The pity of the situation lies in the notion of the musician's managers. They, taking a different view, at once broke for Scot and totaled have broken their contracts with him. A rude return, indeed, for a decision animated by high motive. And it is possible that in other places they will be managers and press agents able to make good capital of the incident for figure. Twenty present disappointment.

SHAW'S FELLOW VILLAGERS.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

America is a nation of villagers. Bernard Shaw is impudent but not original. Dickens and Mrs. Trollope said it a dozen ago. When Americans see offensiveness and dense in England and Germany they only tell of their own imperfections of vision—that is, when they mean to describe Englishmen and Germans. Mr. Shaw is only that the judges other men by a standard of limited sympathy.

In this country a man reared in an old section, where social order and habits are solidified, feels his nerves get into distress when he strikes people who disregard his religion of convention. In England social habits are so natural that they govern every man's view of metaphysics. It has always been hard for a Londoner to see much of good in Americans though it is the Londoner abroad who causes Russians, Frenchmen and Italians to detest the loud, unreasoning, uncouth, intruding island villager flaunting his money and his clothes with unstinted bad manners, and "butting in" upon other people's business.

PROHIBITION IN THE SOUTH.

From the New York Evening Post.

Alabama's swinging into the prohibition line, despite the appeals of some women who preferred the saloons to the loss of license revenues which have been devoted to the schools, was clearly foreshadowed. The schools are vastly better off today, even if their income has been cut, and the state can better afford to make up their loss than at any previous time. The activity of the women in this crusade has been one of its most significant features. Ordinarily, southern women have refrained from open participation in politics. In this case they have made their efforts felt, for or against, in a remarkable way. According to one of the editors of the Denver Rocky Mountain News, who has just returned from a study of the prohibition movement in Alabama, many women there feel that the "southern man is temperamentally unfit to drink strong liquor." Since he won't drink beer or light wines, there is nothing else left but distilled liquor and that, as the editor was informed, "is rank poison to our kind of men living in our climate. There is not a house in this block in which I cannot show you the scar of whisky." Of course, there were plenty of other reasons. The saloonkeepers had worn out public patience by defying the regulation which popular sentiment demanded. It will be interesting to see how Louisiana, Virginia, and the Carolinas follow suit. The latter states should be the next prohibition recruits, unless Tennessee, or even Kentucky, should get ahead of them.

A certain young man of this community was very careless of late he tied his horse one night recently and the horse got loose and wandered off in the woods in search of the other horses and when he found him he had gotten into a ditch and had the buggy turned over. If he hadn't been found when he was the horse would have been dead, for no good luck would have it. ### Character as Legal Tender.

Now, character is a better investment than dollars. Gold is legal tender here, but character is legal tender in two worlds. It is paid for. The A. M. C. A. is a college where character building is the main business. As a cold blooded money proposition, any city can better afford to support a Christian college and the Y. M. C. A. from the public revenue than it can afford to accept pay from many institutions that now contribute to most of our offices. No money is tainted, but the privilege that money sometimes buys, curses and degrades.

Nation's Future Solvency.

The future solvency of the nation will depend more upon morals and men than upon resources. Success in any department of life will be measured by equipment and character. That it has not been so is due to conditions and environments that can never again exist. The purpose of our founders have always been high, but they have not been definite or organized. No statesman has been during much to grasp our destiny. As a nation we are drifted and blundered into power. Our forces, unpowered, sent from land. Vast natural resources have for a generation only held in abeyance and defied the laws of fitness that must now prevail, and, in developing a new continent, there has been so much to do and so few to do it that trained and untrained have alike been in demand. The vanishing domain of virgin territory, the crowding multitude of workers are bringing to a close the era of untrained and rough-and-ready muscle. The age of culture and training dawns. When a slight industrial depression comes a million unemployed will walk our highways with sad and stern resolution will be master of the party of [illegible]. In every crusade, industrial, commercial or professional, the college trained will be captain and leader.

Mrs. [illegible] Campbell, No. 129 South Fifth street, Colorado City, has made a pathetic appeal to the police department to aid her to find her husband, who has been working in a carpenter shop here for several months, but who has vanished, it is believed, from the city in search of employment on the Rock Island.

In her communication to the police she inclosed the following note to her husband:

"Dear Husband: Please come home at once. Our little darling is poorly. She is not expected to live, and is calling for papa day and night. Please do come home at once. Your loving wife."

CHILD SPARED, HE KEEPS OATH

Alexander Pitt Enters Service of Salvation Army Again, in Accordance With Vow.

Registering a solemn oath three years ago over the sick bed of his little daughter, Hazel, that if she were spared he would consecrate his life to christianity and devote his time and talents to the Salvation Army, Alexander Pitt, a farmer living near Arvada, who afterward came to Colorado Springs and served as ensign in the Army, has disposed of his property and will now fulfill his vow, the child having fully recovered. Pitt left Colorado Springs more than a year ago, and has been engaged in the dairy business in Denver, that he might be near his child, who was stricken with meningitis. With his family he left Sunday for Grand Junction, where he has entered the service of the Salvation Army as an ensign. The money that he has accumulated will be used in alleviating the suffering of the poor.

Hazel, the little daughter, is now 9 years old. Her recovery is regarded as almost a miracle by those familiar with the serious nature of her illness.

Before their departure for Grand Junction, Mr. Pitt and his family were given a farewell reception by the Salvation Army in Denver.

A PLEA FOR THE DEACONESS

Hospital Has Made Splendid Record at Great Sacrifice—More Money Needed for New Building.

With words of highest praise and commendation for the hospitals of Colorado Springs, the Rev. E. H. Liles, pastor of the First Cumberland Presbyterian church, at the Thanksgiving union service at the First Baptist church on Thanksgiving day, called special attention to the good being accomplished by the Deaconess hospital.

After commenting on the requirements of a hospital or hospitals in a health resort, the Rev. Mr. Liles said in part:

"If there is any city of the American continent that should have well-equipped hospitals, it is Colorado [illegible] world as a health resort. This our Roman Catholic friends recognized from the start, and hence their two large institutions, which the protestants have assisted them in building and maintaining. But that the demand has been too great for them, to say nothing of the large number of people that prefer a protestant hospital, is seen in that the St. Francis had to enlarge its capacity only a few years ago, while the Glockner is at the present time doubling its capacity. At the same time the little protestant hospital which we have is full all the times and is constantly turning away patients. They kept account during the month of August last, and there were 50 applicants during the month whom they could not take for want of room. They cared for only 268 patients during the year, and if 50 per month is an average of those turned away, that would make 600 turned away during the year, or more than twice the number that they cared for. Besides this, physicians all over the city have told me that they would send more patients out there if they only had more room and better facilities.

A Splendid Record.

With the small plant they have, the deaconesses are hard pressed to pay running expenses, the receipts from June, 1906, to July, 1907, being $6,401 and the expenses $8,236. They do this, and pay interest on a $3,000 debt on the property, $900 of the principal of the same, and yet cared for 36 charity patients, over 13½ per cent of the whole. With a better arranged building the 17 nurses and other working women could care for from two to three times the patients. They have a $15,000 plant, and are gradually paying off the $3,000 debt on it. But how are they to do this? It is the sweet, heroic self-sacrifice of those who are doing the work. Neither the superintendent nor the other graduate nurses get over $5 per month for their services, out of which they must clothe themselves. When you remember that these ladies could get from $25 to $30 per week for private nursing, you can see something of the sacrifice which they are making.

An item which should not be overlooked by Christian givers is, that there were 56 conversions to Jesus Christ during the year. Of course most of the patients were already Christians, and Christians of all denominations.

An Appeal for Help.

Those who have been working to raise the necessary $60,000 to erect the first wing of the new building for the [illegible] have secured pledges to the amount of $43,000, and would it not be a shame upon the people of this city to allow the amount of $17,000 to keep us from going proceeding with the building? The building committee, at its only meeting, decided not to turn a wheel toward the starting of the building till the whole amount was raised. And what more appropriate time than this, our Thanksgiving season to raise that amount? Some of us have given weeks of our time, and some have subscribed largely of their means, and now we appeal to you to come to the rescue.

There is one general fact which I wish to mention, and that is that of all the church hospitals in the country, no money is ever taken from their receipts for private or denominational purposes. This is true of the 25 or more Methodist hospitals, and those of the Presbyterians, Baptists, etc. What money they make is put right back into the institution, either in improving its condition or enlarging its facilities, what it does not take to support the purely charity work. So all that we give for this purpose will remain right here for the benefit of this institution.

BLIND BOONE WILL PLAY

Negro Musical Prodigy to Give Concert Here.

Blind Boone, the negro musical prodigy, prototype of the noted Blind Tom, but differing from the latter in that he invokes higher artistic faculties, will give a piano recital at Payne A. M. E. church on the evening of December 7. Miss Emma Smith, a negress with a sweet soprano voice, will contribute to the program, singing the old plantation melodies. While playing, Boone, who has many peculiarities of execution and expression, sways his body to and fro in time with the music. It is said that, having once heard a selection, he can play it just as he heard it.

Boone, the son of an army cook, was born in Miami, Mo., in 1864. When 6 years old he lost his sight from brain fever. After falling as a student in the school for the blind in St. Louis he was turned into the streets, where he eked out a living from the pennies he earned by playing a mouth harp. He attracted the notice of John Lang, a negro of Columbia, Mo., who gave him a musical education and has since been his manager.

TRIP PLANS MATURING

TERRORS RECEIVE GUARANTEES FROM TWO CITIES.

If Salt Lake Joins Game Christmas Tour for Butte the Match Is Practically Assured.

Negotiations for the trip of the Colorado Springs High School Terrors are now shaping themselves in such a way that it is not improbable that the three-time champions of Colorado will spend their Christmas vacation days playing football with the strongest teams in the northwestern part of the country.

Word has been received from Butte, Montana, by the Terrors of the Western state, that it will make a guarantee for a game with the local High School. Principal Downer of Butte High school, which recently defeated Spokane, has written Principal Richards, stating that if the trip is found feasible, it stands ready to guarantee its share for a game in Butte.

Await News From Salt Lake.

It is expected that definite word will be received from Salt Lake City High school within a short time, and if the Mormons also fall into line, the trip is practically assured. Richard Ewing of this city left for Salt Lake City last Saturday on a business trip, and at that time promised Principal Richards to take the question of a game up with the High school team there and to advise him as to the outcome of the negotiations.

Other schools which might be included in the trip are Seattle, Spokane, Ogden and others in the northwest.

To Renew Training.

If the trip is decided upon, the Terrors will begin training again tomorrow. Several of the men broke training after the Thanksgiving game, but there will be no difficulty in getting the team in the best condition for the long trip during the Christmas holidays. The trip, if taken, will be one of the biggest and most important ever made by a high school team. Two of the most important trips ever made were those taken by Hyde Park High School of Brooklyn, seven years ago, and that of the North Division High school to Seattle for a New Years game in 1906.

The record that the Terrors have made this season is assurance that they will be able to hold their own with the best teams that may be sent against them, no matter where the game is played.

GOLD FOOTBALLS FOR TERRORS

Members of State Championship Eleven to Receive Trophies. Students to Celebrate.

Gold footballs will probably be the emblems the champion High School Terrors will receive as the reward of their season's work. This is the announcement that has been made by Principal Richards. Plans for the securing of the necessary money by subscription among the students of the school are already under way, and it is hoped that the miniature footballs may be received in time for presentation as Christmas presents.

A grand celebration is planned by the students when the three pennants, the trophies for the last three seasons, are received. Through negligence on the part of the league, these pennants have not been forthcoming at the end of each season, but Manager Nye expects to secure all three within a short time.

Captain Morrison plans to entertain the members of the football team at his home some evening this week. At this meeting the captain for next year will probably be elected.

ILLINOIS TEAM WANTS GAME

Moline High School Championship Eleven Would Like to Meet Terrors in Christmas Contest.

MOLINE, Ill., Dec. 3.—The Moline High School football team, which by virtue of its 17 to 6 victory over Rockford high school Saturday, and its season's record, claims the championship of Illinois, is planning on a western trip during the Christmas holidays. It is probable that one of the games on this trip will be with the Colorado Springs High School, champions of Colorado, or with one of the Denver high schools, providing the necessary arrangements can be made. The team will at once begin negotiations for a series of games which will enable it to play the best teams in the Rocky Mountain region and on the Pacific coast.

CUTICURA REMEDIES EFFECTED A CURE

"I had salt rheum for three years on my hands, arms, and face, and I thought it would get all over me. I tried four or five doctors but they failed and my husband has spent hundreds of dollars in trying everything we could hear of. But I grew worse and worse, my hands itched awfully and I could get no rest at all. I was just in agony all the time because when they did not itch they were so dry and crackly that I was miserable and when they cracked, they bled. The nails of my finger and thumb began to come off, and my hands were a solid sheet of sores. Several of my friends told me to try the Cuticura Remedies so I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and from the first my hands began to improve and now they are well, and I think that the Cuticura Remedies are worth their weight in gold, and I advise every one that has skin trouble to use them. ### CHECKERS" COMING

"Checkers" will be seen at the Opera House next Monday. "Checkers" is a story of the race track, of the horses and the men whose hearts beat alike to their hoof beats. It begins with a dash like all races should, and ends with a dash, and in between there are moments when the thunderous hoof beats are muffled in the dirt of the course, and rider and horse are hidden with dust. In these moments there are pathos and pains, sighs and remorse, and then once more the horses breaks through the dust clouds and "Checkers," down to his last hope, and with a sure thing there before his eyes, stakes on a gallant horse the $50 gold piece, his sweetheart had given him for a keepsake, and luck smiles on him, and he wins both fortune and her.

"THE HEIR TO THE HOORAH"

"The Heir to the Hoorah," announced as an American comedy, by Paul Armstrong, will be seen at the Opera House tomorrow evening.

The title, which has a lot of meaning for the initiated, is explained in the fact that the "Hoorah" is an immensely rich gold mine and the "Heir" a male infant. Around the infant, a husband, a wife, a mother-in-law, a Japanese valet, some miners, a cowpuncher, a widow and a maiden aunt. Mr. Armstrong is said to have woven a very merry story.

Joe Lacy, a rough diamond of a man and part owner of the "Hoorah" mine, has just married an eastern society girl named Geraldine Kent. The marriage is not of convenience and has been arranged by a scheming mother-in-law, who has ventured upon settlement of $100,000. This sum is deposited, date "No. 1," pending the fulfillment of the mother's conditions, which are number one, a divorce, number two, a marriage between the girl and the former captain, and number three, separating the man and the girl. So he leaves the rich father in the little cabin to live in charge of his wife and mother-in-law, and starts off to Europe to return to learn the stories of his wife and the old sweetheart, which, to his credit, he does not believe. But while the man and wife are still at sea, a baby is born which is boasted by the miners as "The Heir to the Hoorah." At supper the baby brings about a conflict on its christening day, when the friends of his father present it with a cradle made of a carved trunk of a redwood tree, which they find in the bay filled.

The scene of the christening brings a couple of other little romances to a happy issue also. The rich widow bestows her heart, her hand and her fortune on a Harvard man who would never persist in a fortune that the fortunes which he had lost in the famous little "rocker" of a bank in New York, "at one end of which is great land and at the other the river." At the christening scene and Young people cited to his fate as the dance of a maiden aunt who has been the nightmare of his dreams and he meets a lady and finds her a pretty young girl just escaped from "the genius corporary" at Wellesley.

President Devotes Major Part of Message to a Discussion of Conditions Leading to and Arising From the Recent Panic

Guilty Must Be Punished; Innocent Must be Protected

Immediate Attention of Congress Is Directed to the Money Question—Greater Elasticity of Currency Advised.—Hoarding Given as Cause of Present Stringency

"I Am in no Wise Hostile to Corporations," Says the President, for "This Is an Age of Combination"—Must Be Restrained to Permit of Competition, However

NOTWITHSTANDING the crisis through which the country is passing, due to a temporary stringency, no country on earth has sounder fundamental business principles than ours. This is the declaration of President Roosevelt in his message to the sixtieth congress.

That there is no cause for alarm is evident in the country's boundless prosperity everywhere apparent.

As regards the money situation, the President advocates greater elasticity of the currency. Congress is urged to consider the money problem in a view of securing lasting relief through legislation.

In his division to trusts, the president makes it plain that his campaign against illegal combinations is to be continued. The message in full follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

[illegible] greater resources than any other people, and the marvelous development of the last half century shows that the chief of our nation possesses great energy and industrial ability. In no nation is the employment of high business ability more remunerative. Under such conditions it would be idle to attempt to keep down ability, and it is foolish when such is the case for people to board money [illegible] be prosperity in general business [illegible] inevitably that there be a certain number of failures among the men who have taken too much for their strength. Misfortune is the lot of many honest men, and in a country such as ours there will always be a certain number of failures among those who have taken risks which have proved too great for their capacity. As a rule the business world is quick to take account of the cause of each failure, and to distinguish between the honest man who has met with misfortune through his overmuch zeal or his lack of foresight, or even his misjudgment of others, and the man who has been reckless or dishonest in his business dealings. As a rule we can safely leave the punishment of the latter class of men in the hands of the business community. Occasionally, however, a man who has been guilty of wrongdoing of a peculiarly flagrant and dangerous type in connection with his business dealings, or who has been so prominent that his misdeeds have had a specially far-reaching effect, must be made the object of special governmental action in order to insure his punishment. Occasionally, also, it may be necessary to take some governmental action in order to prevent the continuance of a wrong which it is within the power of a single man or a small group of men to inflict upon the community. As a rule it is best that the punishment for such wrongdoing should come from the action of the courts in the ordinary course of law; but there are cases in which it is necessary that the National government should take action in the matter, either by civil suit or by criminal prosecution.

Negative Laws.

Of course, it is worse than useless to have laws on the statute books which do not correspond with the facts of business life, or which, if they do correspond with the facts, do so only because they are so framed that they can be evaded by the shrewd and unscrupulous wrongdoer, while they hamper and hinder the honest man who is striving to do his duty. Such laws do harm by their mere existence, for they tend to make honest men feel that they are surrounded by a network of needless restrictions, which they can break through only at the risk of being branded as criminals for a quite trivial offense, and they tend to make dishonest men feel that the law is so framed that it can be easily evaded, and that the only people who will be hurt by its provisions are those who are too scrupulous to take advantage of the opportunities for wrongdoing which are open to their unscrupulous competitors. Moreover, in any business community there will always be a certain number of men who are willing to take advantage of any form of lawlessness on the part of others who are engaged in business dealings, on the ground that they can't succeed if they do not do the things which their competitors do, and that if they do these things they are in no worse position than their competitors. Such reasoning is of course, in reality, only a form of cowardice. The business world should be on its guard against the spread of such a feeling, and should treat with the utmost severity those who show themselves to be in any way affected by it. As a matter of fact, the vast majority of the business men of this country are honest, law-abiding men, who do their business dealings in such a way that they need have no fear of the law, and who do not need to be frightened into keeping honest by the threat of the penalty for dishonesty. As a rule they can be trusted to see that their representatives in business do not do wrong, because they themselves will not tolerate wrongdoing on the part of their competitors. As a rule they can be trusted to see that the laws are such that they can not be evaded with impunity by the unscrupulous man who is willing to take advantage of his own lawlessness to the detriment of others. As a rule they can be trusted to see that the laws are such that they can be enforced against those who show themselves to be too dishonest to be affected by the fear of being branded as criminals. Occasionally, however, there will come a time when a wrong is done which it is beyond the power of the average business man to redress, because the wrong is done by means of a device which is too complex to be understood by the average business man, or because the wrong is done by a man against whom the ordinary business man is powerless to contend because of the fact that the wrongdoer is a man of such great wealth and such large business interests that he is able to bid defiance to the ordinary business man. In such cases it may be that the wrong can be redressed only by the action of the National government, because it is the only power which is sufficiently great to deal with the wrongdoer in such cases. In other cases it may be that the wrong can be redressed only by the action of the National government because the wrong is done by means of a device which can be understood only by a man of such special training and such special aptitude for business that there are but few men who are competent to take up the matter from the point of view of the public prosecutor. In such cases it may be that the only way in which the wrong can be redressed is by the action of the National government, because the wrong is done by a man against whom the average citizen is powerless to contend, because of the fact that the wrongdoer is a man of such great wealth and such large business interests that he is able to defy the average business man, and because the wrong is done by means of a device which can be understood only by a man of such special training and such special aptitude for business that there are but few men who are competent to take up the matter from the point of view of the public prosecutor. In such cases it may be that the only way in which the wrong can be redressed is by the action of the National government, because the wrong is done by a man against whom the average citizen is powerless to contend

[illegible] I have in the [illegible] world, and I give my [illegible] play for selfish and political motives. The sole consideration [illegible] be to [illegible] that the sum total of [illegible] Time [illegible] that the subject can not with wisdom [illegible] in the year preceding [illegible] because as a [illegible] of that experience has conclusively [illegible] the public good. In my [illegible] with the [illegible] immediately after such election.

The Income Tax.

When an income tax was retained upon the ground of an income tax and an inheritance tax will only receive the careful attention of our legislators. In my judgment both of these taxes should be part of our system of federal taxation. I speak diffidently about the income tax because one scheme for an income tax was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court, while in addition it is a difficult tax [illegible] great care would have to be exercised so as that it was not evaded by the very men who it was most desirable to have taxed fairly. Conceded it would of course be [illegible] than an inheritance tax, as the least desirable of all taxes is the tax which bears heavily upon the honest as compared with the dishonest man. Nevertheless a graduated income tax of the proper type would be a desirable feature of federal taxation, and it is to be hoped that one may be devised which will stand the test of the courts. Additional revenue for the needs of the government may be obtained from both a tax on inheritances and a tax on incomes, and the question of which of the two shall be adopted should be left to be determined by the experience of the next few years. Congress should not be afraid to try either of these taxes because it may think that one of them may prove to be the better method. Both are taxes which are fair in principle, and far more important than the question of raising revenue is the question of having the fortunes of the country borne in proportion to the means of its citizens in such a way as to prevent the accumulation of immense fortunes which are a menace to the welfare of the nation. The government has the absolute right to decide as to the terms upon which a man shall receive a bequest or devise from another, and this point in the devolution of property is especially appropriate for the imposition of a tax. Laws imposing such taxes have repeatedly been placed upon the national statute books and are repeatedly declared constitutional by the courts, and these laws contained the progressive principle that the larger the amount received by any one person the higher should be the rate of taxation, and that the rate of taxation is increased in proportion to the remoteness of blood of the man receiving the bequest. These principles are recognized alike in the leading civilized nations of the world. In Great Britain all the estates worth $5000 or less are practically exempt from death duties, while the increase is such that when an estate exceeds $5,000,000 in value and passes to a distant kinsman or stranger in blood the government receives all told an amount equivalent to nearly a fifth of the whole estate. In France a man of an inheritance of less than $10,000 pays one-fifth of 1 per cent, but if it passes to a distant relative the Government takes 10 per cent. The Government is especially liberal in dealing with the husband and wife, and in the case of a husband and wife it imposes a measure which allows to the individual states of the empire a portion of the proceeds and permits them to impose taxes in addition to those imposed by the imperial government. Small inheritances are exempt, and the tax is on a sliding scale of progression, and when the inheritance is still not very large, provided it is not an agricultural or forest land, it is taxed at the rate of 3 per cent if it goes to distant relatives. There is no reason why in the United States the national government should not impose inheritance taxes in addition to those imposed by the states, and when we had had an inheritance tax about one-half of the state levied such taxes in conjunction with the national government, making the combined maximum rate in the cases of high estates 25 per cent. The French law has one feature which is to be heartily commended, the progressive principle is so applied that each higher rate is imposed only on the excess above the amount subject to the next lower rate, so that the increase of rate will apply to each portion of the inheritance, and a man will never be [illegible] a higher rate than a man with a smaller inheritance. This is a fair and just method.

A Progressive Tax

The tax would fall lightly on the people, but would heavily upon the residents without the country, that without it a heavy burden of taxation would be borne by those who, by the accident of birth, happened to be born within the country, while those who happened to be born in other lands would escape with a comparatively light burden. Our laws should be framed so as to encourage the investment of capital in this country, and should be so framed as to discourage the investment of our capital in other lands. Our laws should be so framed as to encourage the building up of our own country, and should be so framed as to discourage the building up of other countries at our expense. We do not pay the slightest tax upon our property when we die, but we should be willing to pay a tax upon the property we receive from our fellow-citizens. We do not pay a tax upon our property when we go to war in defense of our country, but we should be willing to pay a tax upon the property we receive from our fellow-citizens when we do not go to war. We do not pay a tax upon our property when we go to our churches to worship God according to the dictates of our consciences, but we should be willing to pay a tax upon the property we receive from our fellow-citizens when we do not go to our churches to worship God according to the dictates of our consciences. We do not pay a tax upon our property when we go to our schools to educate our children, but we should be willing to pay a tax upon the property we receive from our fellow-citizens when we do not go to our schools to educate our children. We do not pay a tax upon our property when we go to our homes to live happily with our families, but we should be willing to pay a tax upon the property we receive from our fellow-citizens when we do not go to our homes to live happily with our families. We do not pay a tax upon our property when we go to our places of business to earn our daily bread, but we should be willing to pay a tax upon the property we receive from our fellow-citizens when we do not go to our places of business to earn our daily bread. We do not pay a tax upon our property when we go to our graves, but we should be willing to pay a tax upon the property we receive from our fellow-citizens when we do not go to our graves court and a general agreement was finally reached in favor of its creation. There was very full discussion of the proposal for such a court and a general agreement was finally reached in favor of its creation. The Conference recommended to the signatory Powers the adoption of a draft upon which it agreed for the organization of the court, leaving to be determined only the method by which the judges should be selected. This remaining question is justly one which time and good temper will solve.

International Prize Court.

A further agreement of the first importance was that for the creation of an international prize court. The constitution, organization and procedure of such a tribunal were provided for in detail. Anyone who recalls the injustices under which this country suffered as a neutral power during the latter part of the last century can not but see in this proposal a step towards the creation of the more general court for the trying of international controversies to which reference has just been made. The organization and action of such a prize court can not fail to accustom the different countries to the submission of international questions to the decision of an international tribunal, and we may confidently expect the results of such submission to bring about a general agreement upon the enlargement of the project.

Numerous provisions were adopted for reducing the evil effects of war and for defining the rights and duties of neutrals. The Conference also provided for the holding of a third Conference within a period similar to that which elapsed between the First and Second Conferences.

The delegates of the United States worthily represented the spirit of the American people and maintained with fidelity and ability the policy of our Government upon all the great questions discussed in the Conference.

Difficulties Encountered.

The reports of the delegates, together with authoritative copies of the conventions signed, when received, will be laid before the Senate for its consideration.

When we remember how difficult it is for one of our own legislative bodies, composed of citizens of the same country, speaking the same language, living under the same laws, and having the same customs, to reach an agreement, or even to secure a majority upon any difficult and important subject which is proposed for legislation, it becomes clear that representatives of twenty different countries, speaking many different languages, accustomed to different methods of procedure, with widely diverse interests, who discussed so many different subjects and reached agreements upon so many are entitled to general appreciation for the wisdom, patience and moderation with which they have discharged their duty. The example of this temperate discussion, and the amicable and the efforts to agree among representatives of all the nations of the earth, acting with full recognition of the supreme obligation to promote peace can not fail to be a powerful influence for good in future international relations.

A year ago if newspapers of a revolutionary movement in Cuba, which threatened the immediate return to chaos of the island, the United States intervened, sending down an army and establishing a provisional government under Governor Magoon. Absolute quiet and prosperity have returned to the island because of this action. We are now taking steps to provide for elections in the island and our expectation is within the coming year to be able to turn the island over again to a government chosen by the people thereof. Cuba is at our door. It is not possible that this Nation should permit Cuba again to sink into the condition from which we rescued it. All that we ask of the Cuban people is that they be prosperous, that they govern themselves so as to bring content, order and progress to their island, the Queen of the Antilles, and our only interference has been and will be to help them achieve these results.

Tokio Exposition.

An invitation has been extended by Japan to the Government and people of the United States to participate in a great national exposition to be held at Tokio from April 1 to October 31, 1912, at which the principal countries of the world are to be invited to take part. This is an undertaking of special interest to all the nations of the world, and I earnestly ask for it the favorable consideration of the Congress, for it is the first instance in which such a great national exposition has been held in a great power dwelling on the Pacific and all the nations of Europe and America will, I trust, join in helping to success this first great exposition ever held by a great nation of Asia. The geographical relations of Japan and the United States as the possessors of such large portions of the coasts of the Pacific the intimate trade relations already existing between the two countries, the warm friendship which has been maintained between them without break since the opening of Japan to intercourse with the western nations, and her increasing wealth and production, which we regard with hearty good will and wish to make the occasion of mutually beneficial commerce, all unite to make it exceedingly desirable that this invitation should be accepted. I heartily recommend such legislation as will provide a generous position for the participation of this Government and its people in the proposed exposition. Action should be taken now. We are apt to underestimate the time needed for preparation in such cases. The invitation to the French Exposition of 1907 was brought to the attention of the Congress by President Cleveland in December, 1897, and it was late the action necessary to such proceedings that the period of four years and a half which then intervened before the exposition proved none too long for the proper preparation of the exhibits.

The Tariff.

The adoption of a new tariff by Germany, accompanied by conventions for reciprocal tariff concessions between that country and most of the other countries of continental Europe led the German Government to give the notice necessary to terminate the commercial convention with this country, which was concluded July 12, 1900. The notice was to take effect on the 1st of March, 1905, and in default of some other arrangements that would have left the exports from United States to Germany subject to the general German tariff duties, from March 1 we met exactly the same treatment as the most favored nations, namely, the lowest duties imposed upon the goods of most of our competitors for German trade.

Under a special agreement made between the two Governments in February last the German Government suspended the operation of their notice which was to take effect July 12, 1905. In the meantime, however, it has been my duty to make every possible effort to prevent a tariff war between the United States and Germany arising from misunderstanding by either country of the conditions existing in the other, and acting upon the invitation of the German Government, I sent to Berlin a special commissioner of competent experience, Mr. Alexander Millard, and with his assistance and advice a modus vivendi was arranged to continue for a few months in conference with a view to the negotiation of a new commercial convention. Such a convention was signed on the 22d of March last, and I have transmitted the text of the convention to the Congress with a view to its prompt consideration and the enactment of the legislation necessary to its operation. The convention provides for the application to the products of each country of the other of the minimum tariff rates of the other upon the basis of the most favored nation treatment. Pending the ratification of this convention the existing modus vivendi will continue in force, but if the convention is not ratified by the Congress it will be necessary for us to give the notice to Germany that we can not longer continue the modus vivendi, and we shall then be subject to the general tariff of Germany. I hope, however, that the convention may be promptly ratified, for it is a good one, and it will be a misfortune if we do not at once put our commercial relations with Germany on the basis of the most favored nation treatment.

Agreement With China.

I ask for authority to renew the agreement with China under which the indemnity of 1900 was fixed, by remitting and cancelling the obligation of China for the payment of that part of the stipulated indemnity which is in excess of the sum of eleven million six hundred and fifty-five thousand, four hundred and ninety-two dollars and sixty-nine cents, and interest at four per cent. After the rescue of the foreign legations in Peking during the Boxer troubles in 1900 the Powers exacted from China the payment of certain indemnities to the several nations, and the total protocol indebtedness, while the troops were withdrawn, remained pending, September 7, 1901, when the amount of this indemnity allotted to the United States was over $20,000,000, and China paid, up to and including the 1st day of June last, a little over $6,000,000. It was the first intention of this Government at the proper time, when all claims had been presented and all expenses ascertained as fully as possible, to revise the estimate and account, and as a proof of sincere friendship for China voluntarily remake that country from its legal liability for all payments in excess of the sum which should prove to be necessary for actual indemnity to the United States and its citizens.

This Nation should help in every practicable way in the education of the Chinese people so that the vast and populous Empire of China may gradually adapt itself to modern conditions. One way of doing this is by promoting the coming of Chinese students to this country and making it attractive to them to take courses at our universities and higher educational institutions. Our educators should, so far as may be wisely possible, meet the Chinese student when he comes to our shores, and so direct his course that when he returns to his native land he will be a missionary of good will toward the United States and of the application of the principles of Christianity to the affairs of his own people.

On the courtesy invitation of the President of Mexico, the Secretary of State visited that country in September and October and was received everywhere with the greatest kindness and hospitality.

He carried from the Government of the United States to our southern neighbor a message in respect and good will and of desire for better acquaintance and increasing friendship. The response from the Government and the people of Mexico was hearty and sincere. No pains were spared to manifest the most friendly attitude and feeling toward the United States.

Trade With Mexico.

In view of the close neighborhood of the two countries the relations which exist between Mexico and the United States are just cause for gratification. We have a common boundary of over 1,500 miles from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pacific. Much of it is marked only by the shifting waters of the Rio Grande. Many thousands of Mexicans are residing upon our side of the line and it is estimated that over 40,000 Americans are resident in Mexican territory and that American investments in Mexico amount to over seven hundred million dollars. The extraordinary industrial and commercial prosperity of Mexico has been greatly promoted by American enterprise, and Americans are sharing largely in its results. The foreign trade of the Republic already exceeds $[illegible] per annum. And of this two-thirds both of exports and imports are exchanged with the United States. Under these circumstances numerous questions necessarily arise between the two countries. These questions are always approached and disposed of in a spirit of mutual courtesy and fair dealing. Americans carrying on business in Mexico testify uniformly to the kindness and consideration with which they are treated and their sense of the security of their rights and enterprises under the wise administration of the great statesman who for so long held the office of Chief Magistrate of that Republic.

Peace in Central America.

The two governments have been putting their efforts for a considerable time past in aid Central America to attaining the degree of peace and order which have made possible the presence of the northern part of the continent. After the peace between Guatemala, Honduras and Salvador concluded under the circumstances described in my last Message, a new war broke out between the Republics of Nicaragua, Honduras and Salvador. The effort to compose this new difficulty has resulted in the assembling of the joint suggestion of the President of Mexico and the United States for a general peace conference between all the countries of Central America. On the 17th day of September last a protocol was signed between the representatives of the five Central American countries accredited to this Government agreeing upon a conference to be held in the City of Washington "in order to devise the means of preserving the good relations among said republics and bringing about permanent peace in these Republics." The protocol expresses the expression of a wish that the Presidents of the United States and Mexico should appoint "representatives to lend their good and impartial offices in a purely friendly way toward the realization of the objects of the conference." The conference is now in session and will have our best wishes and, where it is practicable, our friendly assistance.

One of the results of the Pan American Conference at Rio Janeiro in the autumn of 1906 has been a great increase in the activity and usefulness of the International Bureau of American Republics. That institution, which includes all the American Republics in its membership and brings all their representatives together, is doing a really valuable work in informing the people of the countries stand the title and position and in a close U. United States known to them. Its action is now limited by appropriations contributed when it was doing a work on a much smaller scale and rendering much less valuable service. I recommend that the contribution of this Government to the expenses of the Bureau be made commensurate with its increased work.

[illegible] as well as the tariff on articles the tariffs of the United States and Germany [illegible] the trade relations between the two countries. The commission [illegible] the basis of the proposed treaty [illegible] commercial agreement was entered into by the two countries, pursuant to which, in the exercise of the authority conferred upon the President by the third section of the tariff act of July 24, 1897, I extended the reduced tariff rates provided for in that section to Germany and all other sparkling wines, and pursuant to which the German government [illegible] minimum tariff rates were [illegible] on the products of the United States to Germany. This agreement is to remain in force until the 30th of June, 1908, and until six months after notice by either party to terminate it.

The agreement and the report of the commission on which it is based will be laid before the Congress for its information.

Unsatisfactory Practices.

This careful examination into the tariff relations between the United States and Germany involved an inquiry into certain of our methods of administration which had been the cause of much complaint on the part of German exporters. In this inquiry I became satisfied that certain vicious and unjustifiable practices had grown up in our customs administration, notably the practice of determining the value of imports upon the invoices of foreign exporters, which invoices never discloses to the revenue whose interests were affected. The [illegible] directives, though [illegible] to be [illegible] and [illegible] carefully guarded.

Under our practice as I found it to exist in this case, the abuse had become gross and discreditable. Instead of seeking information as to the market value of merchandise from the well-known and respected members of the commercial community in the district in which the producing owner or shipper were established, from informers on the part of rival employers and business rivals, and upon this kind of secret evidence the values of imported goods were frequently raised and heavy penalties were frequently imposed upon importers who were never permitted to know what the evidence was and who never had an opportunity to meet it. It is quite probable that this system tended towards an increase of the duties collected upon imported goods, but I consider it to be a violation of law to collect more than the law provides, just as it is a violation to admit goods upon the payment of less than the legal rate of duty. This practice was reprehensible in the sight of American law and to American ideas of justice.

In the judgment of the most competent experts of the Treasury Department and the Department of Commerce and Labor it was wholly unnecessary for the due collection of the customs revenues, and the attempt to defend it merely illustrates the demoralization which naturally follows from a long continued course of reliance upon such methods. Accordingly I caused the regulations governing this branch of the customs service to be modified so that values are determined upon a hearing in which all the parties interested have an opportunity to be heard and to know the evidence against them. Moreover, our Treasury agents are accredited to the government of the country in which they seek information, and in Germany receive the assistance of the quasi-official chambers of commerce in determining the actual market value of goods in accordance with what I am advised to be the true construction of the law.

These changes of regulations were adapted to the removal of such manifest abuses that I have not felt that they ought to be confined to our relations with Germany, and I have extended their operation to all other countries which have expressed a desire to enter into similar administrative relations.

Agreement With China.

I ask for authority to renew the agreement with China under which the indemnity of 1900 was fixed, by remitting and cancelling the obligation of China for the payment of that part of the stipulated indemnity which is in excess of the sum of eleven million six hundred and fifty-five thousand, four hundred and ninety-two dollars and sixty-nine cents, and interest at four per cent. After the rescue of the foreign legations in Peking during the Boxer troubles in 1900 the Powers exacted from China the payment of certain indemnities to the several nations, and the total protocol indebtedness, while the troops were withdrawn, remained pending, September 7, 1901, when the amount of this indemnity allotted to the United States was over $20,000,000, and China paid, up to and including the 1st day of June last, a little over $6,000,000. It was the first intention of this Government at the proper time, when all claims had been presented and all expenses ascertained as fully as possible, to revise the estimate and account, and as a proof of sincere friendship for China voluntarily remake that country from its legal liability for all payments in excess of the sum which should prove to be necessary for actual indemnity to the United States and its citizens.

This Nation should help in every practicable way in the education of the Chinese people so that the vast and populous Empire of China may gradually adapt itself to modern conditions. One way of doing this is by promoting the coming of Chinese students to this country and making it attractive to them to take courses at our universities and higher educational institutions. Our educators should, so far as may be wisely possible, meet the Chinese student when he comes to our shores, and so direct his course that when he returns to his native land he will be a missionary of good will toward the United States and of the application of the principles of Christianity to the affairs of his own people.

On the courtesy invitation of the President of Mexico, the Secretary of State visited that country in September and October and was received everywhere with the greatest kindness and hospitality.

He carried from the Government of the United States to our southern neighbor a message in respect and good will and of desire for better acquaintance and increasing friendship. The response from the Government and the people of Mexico was hearty and sincere. No pains were spared to manifest the most friendly attitude and feeling toward the United States.

Trade With Mexico.

In view of the close neighborhood of the two countries the relations which exist between Mexico and the United States are just cause for gratification. We have a common boundary of over 1,500 miles from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pacific. Much of it is marked only by the shifting waters of the Rio Grande. Many thousands of Mexicans are residing upon our side of the line and it is estimated that over 40,000 Americans are resident in Mexican territory and that American investments in Mexico amount to over seven hundred million dollars. The extraordinary industrial and commercial prosperity of Mexico has been greatly promoted by American enterprise, and Americans are sharing largely in its results. The foreign trade of the Republic already exceeds $[illegible] per annum. And of this two-thirds both of exports and imports are exchanged with the United States. Under these circumstances numerous questions necessarily arise between the two countries. These questions are always approached and disposed of in a spirit of mutual courtesy and fair dealing. Americans carrying on business in Mexico testify uniformly to the kindness and consideration with which they are treated and their sense of the security of their rights and enterprises under the wise administration of the great statesman who for so long held the office of Chief Magistrate of that Republic.

Harris Has Good Ore in the Red Bird.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Dec. 3.—D. H. Harris and associates operating on the Red Bird claim of the National company on the [illegible] within sight of this city, will send out a 50-ton consignment of ore tomorrow, which it is believed, will give returns ranging about $60 in gold to the ton. The ore is being mined from the 200-foot level, where a vein of liberal dimensions has been exposed. At times the vein is fully 12 feet wide. It was found after following a narrow streak for some distance. The ore body at this time, however, is of a pretty nature, but is undoubtedly an improvement worth progress.

Another unconfirmed strike is reported to have been made on the Jo Dandy. The ore will run several ounces in gold to the ton. The Jo Dandy strike is said to have been made by accident while cutting a way some rock on the 300-foot level for timber.

GOOD ORE BODY FOUND ON LITTLE CLARA.

Rock Runs High in Silver, Lead and Gold and Vein Is in Place.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Dec. 3.—The Union Leasing company, which is operating a lease on the two north blocks of the Little Clara claim of the Work Mining and Milling company, on the south slope of Gold hill, has within the last [illegible] into a vein of ore at a depth of 500 feet. In the vein there is a streak which is from two to four inches wide and which carries 27 ounces in silver, 37 per cent lead and from $3 to $5 in gold to the ton. The company has just started to prospect this new find, which is something out of the usual in this section of the camp. The material is found in a porphyry formation and the vein is in place.

The Union Leasing company is shipping regularly from the north block of the Mabel M. claim of the Gold Dollar Consolidated, on the east slope of Beacon hill. At a depth of 300 feet, and some little distance from the shaft, a vein about three feet wide has been opened up, and the ore is being broken down two feet wide. This ore is running between two and three ounces in gold to the ton.

The same company is also shipping from the Project-Monitor claims, on the northeast slope of Goldhill, where at an approximate depth of 200 feet, a large vein has been exposed. This ore gives returns ranging from $[illegible] to $40 in gold. The company is also shipping the dump rock on the Lexington.

STOCKS FLUCTUATING

CLOSE IS WEAK AFTER MUCH UNCERTAINTY.

Premium on Currency Is Increased and There Is Unusual Demand for Cash.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Prices were put through a remarkable series of fluctuations today at the stock exchange, without any perceptible explanation for the changes in the current of the news of events. The movement, in fact, was rather obviously [illegible] trading fell into extreme dullness after a time of this experience, which was somewhat bewildering in its effects on the minds of the room traders, who were left in a condition of weariness accurately reflected in the [illegible] movement of the market in its [illegible] intervals of repose.

The recovery in the premium on currency, which approached two per cent today, emphasized this view. Various requirements were reported to exert [illegible] the higher currency premium.

The question of payrolls, the needs of importers in making cash payments of customs and, especially, the persistence of demand from some of the western and southern banks for cash, all were in evidence. The immediate future of the United States treasury finances is also coming in for some serious discussion. It is generally understood that the treasury has met the extraordinary drain of its available cash holdings by the building up of deposits with the national banks by every bookkeeping expedient in the transfer of disbursing offices and other accounts as well as by deferring outlays on application whenever possible. But the postponement of such expenditures does not evade them, and their payment will necessitate the replenishment of the treasury's cash balance.

London continued to sell stocks in this market, notwithstanding the large gains of gold holdings into the Bank of England and the decline in the open market discount rate. The discount rate at Berlin also receded, which development was viewed with special satisfaction in view of the weak position of the Imperial bank of Germany for the week and the anxiety that is felt over the Berlin position generally.

List prices of stocks after the numerous fluctuations were about the lowest of the day.

Bonds were irregular. Total sales par value, $3,880,000.

United States bonds were unchanged on call.

THE BATHTUB CONTEST

From the New York Tribune.

Although the limerick craze is still raging feverishly on both fringes of the Atlantic, time, the refrigerator of all things, will sooner or later terminate this noble enthusiasm. There are certain subtle signs already manifesting themselves here and there which indicate that a new center of popular interest is stealthily forming. The bathtub now appears to be the ordained successor of back porch poetry. The other day a Chicago settlement worker set forth the news that the 60,000 people living in the Seventeenth ward of Chicago have 70 bathtubs among them. This boastful utterance could not reel long without an answer. Forty-eight hours later the head of Boston's North End settlement rushed to the telegraph office with the dispatch that 70,000 Italians within her hospitable domain have about 80 bathtubs, and she infer [illegible] saying the charge of exaggeration, [illegible] there are [illegible] this number of tubs and that the inhabitants "haven't [illegible] to fall back [illegible] is highly [illegible] for 70,000 [illegible] Boston [illegible] her [illegible] Philadelphia [illegible] to 1,111 [illegible] of the fall. [illegible] the [illegible] that brothers.

It is safe to predict, however, that the story will not end with this tale of two cities. American towns are proud, and the [illegible] of [illegible] will keep [illegible] the end [illegible] of the [illegible] Chicago [illegible] Boston [illegible] Italians [illegible] to all [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
